PURPOSE: It is our responsibility as stakeholders, historians, servants to our community to protect our cultural heritage, history and historic places, which for many of these sites, which we hope will sustain the changes, and to continue to educate the importance of a time before us, that can continue to move forward into the future.

This Historic Cultural Monument application will be leaving a legacy in Boyle Heights well after our time on the board and on this earth, for those that have passed.

Originally known as the German Hospital built circa 1910 by John Paul Krempel (1861-1933) from Germany who also designed the The Los Angeles Times building on Broadway in the Richardsonian Romanesque style but more importantly he also designed the Eastside Brewing Company Brewery Building at 2100 North Main Street, a Historical Cultural Los Angeles City landmark.

Exterior view of three-story Federal-style German Hospital with a portico entrance and a balcony above the portico, Boyle Heights.

On the portico is a sign which reads: "German Hospital".
